Why A Women's College?

1. Women generally experience a decline in academic confidence during the college years and actually ~~fail~~, or rather, the negative social consequences associated with high achievement.<sup>1</sup>
2. Graduates of women's colleges are more than twice as likely to have been cited for career achievement than women graduates of coeducational colleges.<sup>2</sup>
3. The development of young women of talent into successful adults is directly proportional to the number of role models to whom they have access. As the faculty/women student ratio increases, so too does the output of career-successful women graduates.<sup>2</sup>
4. As the percentage of men students increases, the percentage of women achievers decreases proportionately. Men students and women faculty emerge as primary determinants of the number of women achievers.<sup>3</sup>
5. Participation in such career-critical areas of study as science, mathematics and economics is far higher at women's colleges than for women undergraduates nationally.<sup>3</sup>
6. Freshmen at women's colleges tend to have higher educational aspirations than freshmen women in general.<sup>3</sup>
7. Freshmen at women's colleges show a strong pattern of political interest and involvement.<sup>3</sup>
8. Women's colleges traditionally have shown greater sensitivity to the importance of significant female leadership figures.<sup>4</sup>
9. Women's colleges have given the sociability group to women -- student governments, newspapers, governing student committees -- both dignity and status.<sup>4</sup>
10. Historically, women's colleges have invested more resources in personal and career counseling for their students than men's or coeducational institutions.<sup>4</sup>

Computer Science and The Liberal Arts

Pictured on our cover are members of the sesquicentennial class of 1986, the first freshman class at Wesleyan to have access to the new Hewlett-Packard computer recently installed in the Computer Center in the Willet Library. Some of these freshmen will pursue a computer science major. Others seek computer literacy as they pursue their chosen field in the liberal or fine arts.

A rapidly growing number of educators in the liberal arts is reaching a very important conclusion. There is a significant place for computer technology within the framework of the liberal arts curricula. Proponents of this theory feel that liberal arts students must have a working knowledge of modern technology in order to take their rightful place in the world in which they will live and work.

"We cannot in good conscience claim to be educating persons today in the field of liberal arts, preparing them to be strong and critical, and whole human beings able to make judgements about things that impinge most crucially on their lives, unless we include the phenomena of technology," says Nannerl O. Keohane, President of Wellesley College. "An education in the liberal arts must recognize that the domain of human beings is becoming more technological," she argues.

A recent conference arranged by the Alfred O. Sloan Foundation was held to discuss its plans for a new program to aid liberal arts institutions introducing technological studies and quantitative methods into their curricula. This departure in interest by a major foundation which traditionally supports work in science, technology, and engineering reflects the growing concern by such groups that without introducing some technology to liberal arts that liberal arts graduates could be alienated by a technological society.

Some educators argue that incorporating quantitative and analytical skills into liberal education could produce a technological mode of thought that is contrary to the modes of thought traditionally associated with a liberal arts education.

But Wesleyan's Dean of the College, Dr. Kayron McMinn, feels that Wesleyan has taken a very important step in introducing computer science into the curricula. "The computer is a calculating and communicating device," says Dean McMinn. "Both communication and mathematical calculations are part of the traditional liberal arts curricula." She further notes that the mental skills of logic and reasoning required in computer science are the same skills ideally acquired through a liberal arts education.

Women are increasingly interested in computer science, but still in smaller numbers than men. The ability to use computers will be a crucial factor in the job markets and in the powerful positions of the future. If women are not trained in this necessary technology, they could be excluded from competing successfully in their fields on an equal basis with men.

The uses of computer programs in other liberal arts disciplines shows great promise. Political science and international relations simulations, social science problems, psychological statistical studies and individualized instruction for education majors are all ways that the computer can make learning more exciting in other disciplines. Accounting, management and marketing problems also can be simulated on the computer.

The availability of computer science courses also allows Wesleyan to offer an important opportunity to non-traditional age students. Courses are being offered in the evening through Wesleyan's Center for Continuing Studies.

Georgia Writers Series

Wesleyan's 1982-1983 Georgia Writers Series is bringing to campus accomplished Georgia writers and editors. In its second year, the series has been planned to enhance English studies, to give English students the opportunity to meet and learn from women of achievement in their field, and to give all students the opportunity to converse with accomplished women in literature in Georgia.

September's speaker was Virginia Spencer Carr, author of the highly acclaimed biography of Carson McCullers. Mrs. Carr spoke on the pitfalls and windfalls of writing a biography. Currently she is completing a biography of John Dos Passos, to be published next year by Doubleday. Most recently she was a Fulbright

Belk Lecture To Feature Women in Religion

"Women in Religion in the South" will be the subject for the 1982 - 1983 Belk Lectureship. Four ordained women ministers of the United Methodist Church will come to campus for a panel discussion on this vital new role of women in the South. This event is scheduled for January 11 at 7:30 p.m.

In selecting the panelists, the Programs and Exhibitions Committee sought outstanding young women in ministry who were serving the Church in varying capacities. Represented will be a campus minister, an associate pastor of a large church, and the pastor of a Methodist church in a small Georgia community.

Moderator for the panel will be the Reverend Marcia J. Cochran of Ocilla, Georgia, counselor and chairperson of the Commission on the Role and Status of Women in the South Georgia Conference. Three panelists have been selected: Charlene Payne Kammerer, '70, Assistant Minister to Duke University; Leigh Ann Raynor, pastor of the the Abbeville Methodist Church; and Robin Lee Fitch, associate pastor at Porterfield Methodist Church in Albany, Georgia.

In 1924, the Reverend S. R. Belk, a trustee of Wesleyan, established a fund to be used to bring programs to the campus for the purpose of "inspiring and enriching the intellectual and spiritual life of the student body and community."

"I feel that the timely subject of Women and Ministry is very much in keeping with the stated purpose of the Belk Lectures," observed Mrs. Corawayne Wright, chairman of the Programs and Exhibitions Committee. "It should be of vital interest to our student body and to the Middle Georgia community."

Scholar to Poland, where she taught American Literature at the English Institute of the University of Wroclaw.

October's featured speaker was Faye Junkins Gibbons, a junior book author. Mrs. Gibbons has received promising reviews of her first published novel, Some Glad Morning. It is the story of a 10-year-old girl who learns to deal with an alcoholic father, a proud mother and a host of shiftless relatives in the North Georgia mountains.

Others scheduled include Michelle Ross, Book Editor for The Atlanta Journal and Constitution and Jan Agee, publisher of The Georgia Journal.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for our students as well as people in the Macon community to talk with writers, especially women, who are achievers in the literary field," said Ann Munch, Chairman of the English Department at Wesleyan and Director of the Georgia Writers Series. "We want to emphasize the creative potential in Georgia by inviting a variety of writers and editors from the state to speak with our students. Last year the schedule included a novelist, poet, book publisher, newspaper columnist and a writer of children's literature. This year, we have extended the series to include a magazine publisher and a book reviewer. Although we want the series to be as versatile as possible, we do concentrate on women in literature."

ANCHORS AWEIGH!

by Laura Barkley

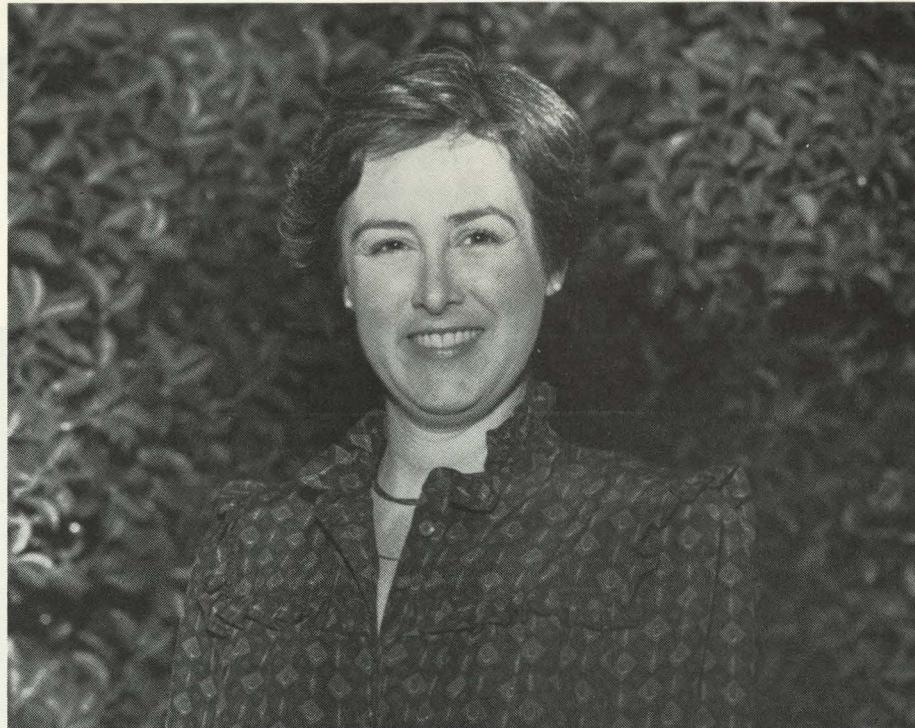

With the formal adoption of the Institutional Statement of Purpose by the Board of Trustees at its May meeting, Wesleyan College reached a major milestone. The statement establishes Wesleyan's commitment to educating women in the Liberal and Fine Arts in an environment specifically designed to meet the ever-changing needs of women, and undergirded by Christian ideals.

An institution's statement of purpose is its very heart, for all institutional endeavors emanate from this source. In one sense it can be said that it is simply a further definition of the purpose stated in the official charter of the college. But more importantly, this further definition defends that original purpose by answering the question, "Why?" Further, it answers the question, "How?" by providing a blueprint from which to plan strategic programs to achieve the institution's goals.

"Why" Wesleyan chooses to maintain her distinct identity as a women's college is not based on hopes and speculation, nor on sentimental attachment to tradition and history. Wesleyan chooses to be a women's college because concrete evidence compiled in numerous studies over the past decade proves the need "for women only" educational institutions.

Additionally, recent studies also show a dramatic increase in the "demand" for women's colleges. Between 1970 and 1980, undergraduate "headcount enrollment in women's colleges grew a total of 14.8%, despite declines in enrollment for the years between 1970 and 1975. (Profile II: A Second Profile of Women's Colleges, Analysis of the Data; The Women's College Coalition, November, 1981.)

According to the Statement of Purpose, Wesleyan will address the educational needs of women in a residential environment which emphasizes the integration of curricular and noncurricular elements. This environment serves to expand women's aspirations for their lives by enhancing the intellectual / creative foundation of the Liberal and Fine Arts with practical experiences that will assist them to develop the skills, confidence, and the flexibility to meet a variety of choices. Further, with its affirmation of the bond with the United Methodist Church, the Statement of Purpose recognizes that educators have an equal responsibility to promote in the college community the ethical and moral climate necessary to sustain principled living.

Consensus among the various college constituencies in the definition and formulation of a statement of purpose is essential if the ultimate goals are to be realized. Arriving at this consensus at Wesleyan has taken two years and has involved innumerable people.

The President's Commission on Goals initiated the process of assessing Wesleyan's mission with its published report in September, 1980. Too, the sense of crisis and controversy surrounding the question of affiliating with Mercer University, which arose simultaneously, served to force us to scrutinize and factually substantiate our belief in the validity and viability of a women's college in these times of uncertain social and economic pressures.

Responding to these two events, the Trustee Committee on Academic and Student Affairs shepherded the formulation of the Statement of Purpose through 17 documented steps to arrive at a true consensus from all constituencies. The faculty endorsed the Statement on March 2, 1982, and the trustees finalized this assessment-by-consensus with their unanimous adoption of the Statement on May 21, 1982.

Often during these two years, lines from a children's poem seemed to best describe my own frustration in observing this arduous, at times painful, but vital process.

*"Our anchor's too big for our ship,
So we're sittin' here tryin' to think.
If we leave it behind we'll be lost.
If we haul it on board, we will sink.
If we sit and keep talkin' about it,
It will soon be too late for our trip..."*

Wesleyan responded to this dilemma by rowing harder and slowly building a sturdier ship. How grateful we are that we did not "cut anchor" in the face of the storm. Now we have that anchor to steady our course.

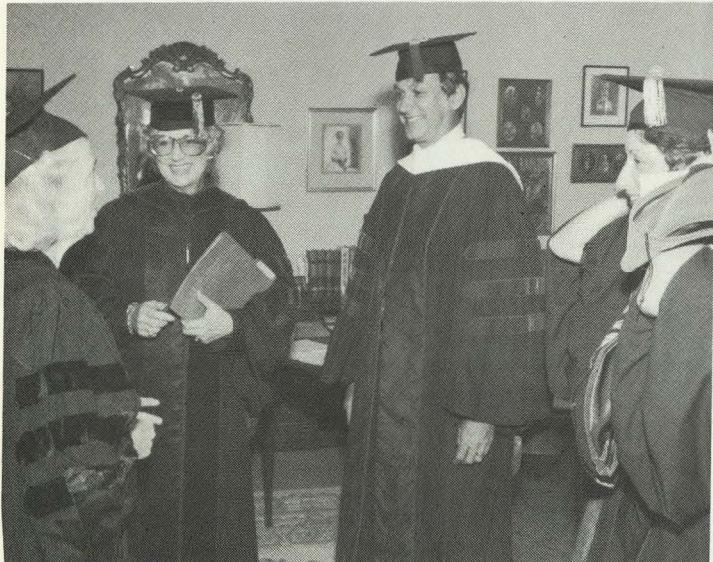

The Alumnae Association has steadily maintained its determination to be a positive, active force in the building of our ship. The exciting part of our adventure is just beginning. As programs are developed from the chart that is the Statement of Purpose, there will be many opportunities for specific affirmative action by alumnae.

We look to the sailors of our ship, the Board of Trustees and the President of the College, for perseverance, determination and commitment to the cause of women's education.

I celebrate that the time has finally come to quit "talkin' about it" and to get on with our trip. For this alumna, and for Wesleyan College, it's raise the gangplank...anchors aweigh...full steam ahead!

IN MEMORIAM

Mr. D. Abbott Turner

The recent death of Mr. D. Abbott Turner represented for Wesleyan College the loss of one of its most devoted friends.

Mr. Turner had many associations with the College, some going as far backward in time as the founding of Wesleyan. He was a descendant of George Foster Pierce, the first President of Wesleyan. His grandmother, Mrs. Ella Pierce Turner, was one of the founders of the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. His daughters, Mrs. Sarah Louise Butler and Mrs. Betty Corn, are graduates of Wesleyan. Mrs. Butler presently serves on the Board of Trustees of the College. His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Bradley Turner, held an honorary degree from Wesleyan.

Mr. Turner, a loyal Trustee of the College for many years, with his own funds and through the Bradley Foundation, which he chartered and liberally endowed, made a number of generous gifts to Wesleyan. One such gift was a residence for the president of the College, which included some forty acres of land adjacent to the campus. A grateful Board of Trustees named the land "Turner Acres" and the house "Bradley Hall." The Bradley Foundation continues in its generous support of the College.

Of his many gifts and services, one other deserves special mention. His good friend, Mr. William N. Banks, at that time Chairman of the Board of Trustees, made a magnificent donation to the College for the purpose of endowing a Department of United States Language and Literature. Almost immediately afterward the College became involved in a campaign to redeem the Wesleyan Bonds which had become worthless to their holders when the College, years earlier, had been forced into bankruptcy. Mr. Banks generously allowed the endowment fund to be diverted from the purpose he had cherished to that campaign. However, Mr. Turner resolved that the endowment fund must be replaced. With some of his friends he replaced the money and made possible the endowment of the Banks Department of United States Language and Literature.

Anyone familiar with the city of Columbus, Georgia, knows of the many civic, cultural, and religious benefits bestowed on that community by Mr. Turner. But his influence went far beyond Columbus. Through his business associations in Atlanta, Macon, and elsewhere, and through his interest in the affairs of The Methodist Church throughout the State, his was an influence that was felt throughout Georgia.

A loving husband and father, an astute businessman, a devoted churchman, a concerned citizen, a quiet but forceful leader, a man of convictions, Mr. Turner was one of those people whose lives make a difference in the struggle toward the betterment of human existence.

Alumnae Weekend April 15, 16, 17, 1983

Many alumnae have expressed a desire to return to the "cluster plan" of reunion at Wesleyan. For the past several years we have used the five-year reunion class plan. Our alumnae have missed seeing their friends from other classes who were at Wesleyan when they were here. The Alumnae Board of Managers has voted to return to the "cluster plan." The milestone reunions such as 10th, 25th, 35th, and 50th will be observed each year.

“Law is still a man’s world. That’s why I chose a women’s college.”

Darla Grinstead, Attorney, Wesleyan College '77, Emory School of Law '80.

“Studies have proven it. In what is still essentially a man’s world—be it law or any other field—the majority of women who are most successful are those who attended women’s colleges.

“Having attended Wesleyan College for women, I know why. Women there have all the key roles—in the classroom, athletics, everything. They get a taste of success that builds confidence in their abilities to achieve not only productive careers, but successful marriages and happy families as well.

“With its 10 to 1 student-faculty ratio, strong 4-year liberal arts curriculum and nationally recognized internship program, Wesleyan provides the ideal background for today’s woman. It helped open the door for me into law school and it still helps me each day as an attorney.”

For more information, call weekdays 8:30 to 5, or write the Office of Admissions, Wesleyan College, 4760 Forsyth Road, Macon, Georgia 31297.
